DANGER OF FIRE HAS INCREASED

IS CAUSE OF MOST FIRES

Over 65 Per Cent of Blazes During This Year Direct Result of Fouled Flue, Reports Fire Chief Aumen.

As a result of having been compelled to burn much soft coal and wood during the past winter, the fire hazard in all Gettysburg homes has been increased to an alarming extent, over 65 per cent of the calls for the fire department here during the past seven months having been the direct result of foul chimneys, according to some startling figures just divulged by Fire Chief James B. Aumen.

The disastrous results of the fire Thursday at the corner of Franklin and High streets are made the occasion for warning all residents here that chimneys should be frequently cleaned, not less than once a year, says Mr. Aumen. Soft coal and wood result in quick fouling and sooting of flues, he states.

This last fire was the direct result of a sooty chimney, in the opinion of Mr. Aumen. According to his statement, when the fire company arrived at the scene of the blaze the chimney was like a roaring furnace, and the fire had evidently broken through and set fire to the wood under the roof. Matters were further complicated by the fact that the flue was cracked, allowing the flames and sparks to escape, he declares.

Where flues are perfectly tight, it is possible to confine the flames to the chimney, and to largely control and prevent the spread of fire by the use of chemicals alone, says the Fire Chief.

Of the 18 calls for the fire department during less than seven months of this year, 12 of these have been the direct result of foul chimneys, records of the department show. With 17 responses to blazes during 1922, 8 were caused by the accumulated soot in the flue catching fire. This, it is said, is evidence that burning of soft coal in Gettysburg has increased the fire hazards.

Tells What To Do
Due to the increasing numbers of these fires, the Chief has issued brief instructions to householders as to their actions in case of a chimney blazing up.

"First: No matter how slight the chimney fire, call the fire department."
"Second: Throw a generous quantity of salt into the stove, if it contains fire, or into the flue where there is fire. The gas from salt is deadly to fire."

"You may look for the Fire Marshal to call on you at any time to inspect your chimney, and, if found defective, make repairs at once. Always remember that your carelessness in having a foul or defective chimney may cause you to lose your property and endanger your neighbors," added Mr. Aumen.

RAPS BLOCKING OF THE HIGHWAY

Rule Against Parking On Improved Section Will Be Enforced.

PUBLIC SUPPORTS LAW

Secretary Wright is Commended For Plan to Keep Roads Clear For Traffic and Safety.

The Gettysburg detachment of the State Police has received from Major Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of the department, a copy of the no-parking rule issued several days ago by Paul D. Wright, secretary of highways, and Major Adams instructs the troopers to enforce the provisions of the highway secretary's order that under no conditions may any vehicle be parked, for any reason whatever, on the improved portion of the highways. The first arrest made here under the new ruling was several days ago when a New York car passed another machine near the brow of a hill on Buford avenue and forced two troopers off the highway.

Since the issuance of the no-parking rule, Secretary Wright has received many letters of approval from every section of Pennsylvania, it is reported from Harrisburg.

The department of highways has called to the attention of the State Police a number of locations at which road users prevent the orderly passage of two-way traffic, and it has asked that the policemen keep these sections clear. The list of such places includes the William Penn Highway, near Annville, where there is an aviation field; the Harrisburg-Gettysburg pike, in the vicinity of a ball field at White Hill, and at several eating stands between Dillsburg and Gettysburg; on the William Penn Highway one mile west of Duncansville, where there is a picnicking ground and swimming pool; on the Lincoln Highway west of Coatesville, at a swimming pool; east of Pottsville at a pleasure park and baseball field; on the William Penn Highway east of Mill Creek, at a picnicking ground; on

DOLLINGS HARD-PRESSED

Petition For Receivership of Philadelphia Offices Asked by Three Men Thursday.

Following the action of the Ohio courts, where a receivership for the R. L. Dollings Company was petitioned several days ago, a similar action was started in Philadelphia Thursday. The Federal District court in that city was petitioned Thursday afternoon to appoint a receiver to take over the business of the concern, with offices at 1421 Walnut street.

It is estimated that Gettysburg and Adams county citizens have invested close to a quarter of a million dollars in the stocks and securities of the Dollings companies.

The Philadelphia action was started by three petitioners who accuse the officers and directors of the company "with gross mismanagement," and paying dividends to stockholders of subsidiary concerns out of the Dollings capital.

The company owns a controlling interest in the American Bronze corporation, Berwyn, Pa.; Crane Ice Cream company, Philadelphia; the Phoenix Iron Works company, the Commercial Truck Service company, both of Philadelphia, and the McCambridge company, a plumbing concern, Philadelphia.

Some of the subsidiary companies, the bill states, are not earning dividends on their preferred stock, but nevertheless their stockholders have been paid dividends out of their capital assets, or out of the capital assets of the Dollings company, under a policy being pursued by Benham and Harrison, who, it is declared, are dominating the company. The result of the payments of dividends from capital, the three stockholders contend, is to impair the capital of the Dollings company, and unless Benham and Harrison are restrained from this course, it is asserted all the company's assets will be wasted.

Town Council's Inspection of Chambersburg Disposal Plant Sheds No Light on Local Problem

Solution of Gettysburg Dilemma is More Clouded Than Before is Belief of Those Taking Trip to Neighboring Town.

Is Felt That Task of Raising Funds For Plant Here Promises to be Colossal. Practical Suggestions Are Awaited.

Inspection of the Chambersburg sewage disposal plant Thursday afternoon by members of the Gettysburg town council and other public spirited citizens threw no added light on how the local problem can be solved.

If anything, the situation confronting Gettysburg in the matter of what to do with its sewage so as to make the waste water less offensive now becomes more clouded, those who made the tour of inspection say.

Chambersburg's sewage disposal plant frequently was pointed out to members of the Gettysburg town council as what this town needs, but those who went to the Cumberland Valley town and learned the original cost and the amount of money necessary to maintain the plant there saw a colossal task ahead to raise funds to erect a similar plant here.

According to C. B. Dougherty, president of the Gettysburg town council, Chambersburg built its present disposal plant in 1911 at a cost of $64,000, including the site. Since that time the county seat town of Franklin has expanded, with the result that the sum of $25,000 is now being spent by Chambersburg borough to enlarge the plant.

Five thousand dollars a year is spent by Chambersburg on operating expenses of their plant, President Dougherty said. The plant is quite large, the filtering basin alone being 200 feet square and six feet deep. In all the plant covers an acre of ground. In discussing the erection of a plant here similar to that of Chambersburg, Mr. Dougherty said: "It would cost us $100,000 to build a sewage disposal plant like Chambersburg's, if their cost then $64,000 twelve years ago."

The annual cost of operating the present disposal plant here is not half of $5,000, but it would be all of that amount if a system like Chambersburg's was installed here, Mr. Dougherty added.

Members of the Chambersburg borough council who escorted the local party over their disposal system advised against the erection of a plant here in sections. They said it would not be practicable and would not help the present situation, since some of the essential parts of the plant would not be installed at once. The waste water from such an incomplete plant, they said, would contain much of the solid matter of which sewage is partly composed.

Chambersburg's plant when first erected was large enough to dispose of all waste matter, but as time went on the plant became overloaded. Such plants are accustomed to some overload, it was stated by the Chambersburg borough authorities, but at present it is carrying a 70 per cent overload, which makes necessary the improvements now being made.

First estimates on a sewage disposal plant for Gettysburg placed the figure at $30,000. A proposed bond issue for this amount was suggested, but the general opinion seems to be that the tax payers would veto such a measure. To have the cost of a modern

BUSINESS BOOM IN LITTLESTOWN

New Cabinet Factory Progressing; Another New Industry is Anticipated.

Adams county's southeast representative, Littlestown, is undergoing a boom in industries at the present time that is making the rest of the county sit up and take notice. Affairs of the recently formed Keystone Cabinet Company are progressing, the officers are proceeding with the erection of the buildings for this new industry, and prospects are bright for the location of a branch factory of the General Cigar Company in Littlestown.

Representatives of the cabinet company this week at the administrators sale of the estate of Laura V. Stauffer in Littlestown purchased a part of the forty acre tract on the south side of the railroad where the building will be erected. The amount of land purchased was three acres, and has a frontage along the railroad of 440 feet. The purchase price was $1500. This was stated to be reasonable for this land.

The building will be 260x60 feet. This will not include the dry kiln and other necessary buildings. The Pennsylvania Railroad company has been notified, and it is expected they will send engineers here within a very short time to lay out the switch. As soon as this is done the foundation of the building will be started.

The prospects for another industry locating in Littlestown are very good. Those who are in authority are negotiating with J. J. Spangler, seeking to rent his building on Lumber street, that was originally the old skating rink, for a branch factory of the General Cigar Company. This company has a large number of factories located in many different places. Instead of having a large factory in one central place they establish smaller factories. In doing this it makes it less difficult to secure the necessary help, and labor trouble, that might tie up one large factory, is reduced to a minimum, it is stated.

With scores of people from Gettysburg, between 5,000 and 6,000 persons attended the annual Reformed reunion at Pen Mar Thursday, one of the most successful in the history of the Potomac Synod, according to church officials.

Automobiles and trains bound for the mountain resort started early in the morning, and continued to pour into the park from all directions throughout the day.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Creitz, of Reading, made the principal address, while the musical program was carried out by soloists and a quartet from Trinity Reformed Church at York. Rev. Dr. Conrad Clever, of Hagerstown, delivered the prayer.

A church building fund, known as the Pen Mar Reunion Building Fund, was completed Thursday at the park, and $500 was turned over to the Synod treasury. This fund was started several years ago, and about $50 remained to raise it to the $500 mark, that amount being contributed Thursday.

Children of the Orphan's Home near Littlestown, were present at the park all day, and composed a portion of the representation from this section. College hour, an annual featured, followed the regular program, and consisted of yells and songs from students of the various church institutions. The reunion is held under the auspices of the Potomac Synod. H. T. Weaver, of Gettysburg, is one of the directors of the annual reunion.

Funeral services Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from her late home conducted by the Rev. Earl J. Bowman, pastor of St. James Lutheran church. Interment in Evergreen Cemetery.

TO HELP FARMERS AGAIN BUY CATTLE

Service Rendered in Adams County Last Year To Be Extended.

FORMER AGENT IS ACTIVE

Paul Hoffman, Secretary of Pennsylvania Federation of Farm Bureaus, Outlines Plans For Coming Fall.

Expanding upon the constructive work of the Adams County Farm Bureau in purchasing feeder steers in the western markets to be fattened on Adams county farms and selling them in sufficiently large groups to attract distant buyers, the State Federation of Farm Bureaus has completed plans for rendering this service to feeders all over the State.

"Five hundred and fifteen head of western steers, averaging 900 pounds, were bought on the Chicago market last fall at a price range of from $5.40 to $6.50 per hundred for Adams county feeders," Paul Hoffman, secretary of the State Federation of Farm Bureaus, former county agent here and pioneer in inaugurating steer feeding in Adams county, said today.

"Add to the initial cost an outlay for freight, insurance and expenses of the purchasing committee, 75 cents per hundred, and the farmers received the finest lot of feeder steers ever taken into the county. The purchasing committee exercised extreme care in getting uniform car lots, with the result that evenness in size, color and fitness reflected markedly." (Continued on Third Page)

Samuel Shilling, 80, Was Wounded in Battle of Gettysburg.

"I attribute the fact that I am as active and healthy as many men of sixty," said Mr. Shilling, "to total abstinence from the use of alcoholic beverages." When asked about the use of tobacco he replied: "I've smoked most of the time since I can remember," as he pulled a long, black cigar from an inside pocket and proceeded to "light up."

Mr. Shilling was a member of Company E, 148th Pennsylvania Voluntary Infantry, during the war.

Columbus, Ohio, July 20.—R. L. Pittsburgh, July 20.—The body of Mrs. Julia Coyne, the girl bride of Patrick Coyne, was laid to rest today while county detectives continued their vigil at the husband's bedside in a hospital in an effort to get from him some knowledge of her murder last Tuesday.

The nude body of the girl who had been beaten and shot was found in her home a few hours after Coyne had his legs cut off by a train while at work in a steel mill.

A dramatic incident of the funeral was the statement of John Conroy, father of the girl, who as the casket was lowered into the grave declared: "I know who killed her. I am sure of it and he will answer to me the first time we meet on the street, if we ever do."

Warren, July 20.—Patrick Ponsoll, who was led to freedom from the Warren County jail Tuesday evening, and Miss Mary McCann, who is alleged to have opened the doors of his cell, after stealing the keys from the sheriff's residence, were arrested at noon Thursday, when a raiding party consisting of three members of the local police force and five deputies from the sheriff's office surrounded an old barn just outside the borough limits.

When taken they were buried under a pile of hay and provided with food enough to last several days.

Emmett Ponsoll, brother of the fugitive, who is said by the police to have aided in the delivery, was arraigned Thursday afternoon and is being held for appearance in court. Mrs. Emmett Ponsoll has been released as it has been definitely established that she had no part in the affair.

Two Cars Meet On Bridge

Mrs. G. H. Bickel, Ringgold, was slightly injured and her husband narrowly escaped, when their automobile and the machine of Mark Pryor, Ringgold, crashed on a one way bridge between Smithsburg and Ringgold. Mrs. Bickel's face was badly lacerated, but the injuries are not serious. The Bickels were on their way from their home to Smithsburg, while the Pryor machine was coming in the opposite direction. Just as the former's machine passed over the bridge, it collided with the Pryor car, both of which were damaged. Bickel then lost control of his machine when one wheel was torn off and the car plunged through a fence beside the road. Pryor's car was damaged, but he escaped injuries.

OIL LEAK FORCES MAUGHAN DOWN

Dawn-to-Dusk Flier's Attempt to Cross Country Fails Again.

MADE ILL BY FUMES

After Delay of Half Hour For Repairs to Tank, Continued Flight Brings Back Original Trouble.

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 20.—Lieutenant Russell L. Maughan was forced to land at the air mail field at Rock Springs, Wyoming, at 5:08 p. m. Thursday and will not be able to continue his transcontinental dawn-to-dusk flight, according to a radio message to the local air mail field from the air mail station at Rock Springs.

The message received at the local station read:

"Maughan landed 5:08. Cannot continue flight this date." The plane was leaking oil at Rock Springs, it was said.

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 20.—Lieutenant Russell L. Maughan passed Kawings, Wyo., at 4:19 p. m., mountain time (7:19 eastern daylight saving time) and apparently making a speed of 200 miles an hour. It is evident that Maughan is making a desperate effort to regain the time lost on the schedule in Cheyenne.

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 20.—Lieutenant Russell L. Maughan, en route from New York to San Francisco, on a dawn-to-dusk airplane flight, landed on the Cheyenne air mail field at 2:32 o'clock Thursday afternoon (mountain time) with his motor leaking oil so badly that he was almost overcome by the fumes of burning oil.

Mechanics repaired the break, working feverishly while Maughan lay on a canvas spread nearby, recovering from his nausea, rising only occasionally to give them directions.

At 3:25 p. m., mountain time, Maughan hopped off in the repaired machine on the last lap of the flight.

Racing with the sun, Maughan, completing the third span of his flight, was 1670 miles on his way, with less than 1000 miles to go before sunset. Before reaching the coast, Maughan will gain another hour by the clock as he speeds into Pacific time.

He landed on the Cheyenne air mail field. The distance Maughan has covered is 100 miles less than two-thirds of the distance from New York to San Francisco. The air route distance from Cheyenne to San Francisco is 890 miles.

Maughan's average speed from New York to Cheyenne, without deducting time for stops, was 135.6 miles an hour.

Maughan reported that an oil leak developed in his motor when he was about ninety miles out from Cheyenne, and that fumes from this nauseated him.

Maughan, despite his illness, made a perfect landing. He circled the field three times before landing because, he said, his speed on the first two circles was too great for a landing to be made safely.

As he stepped from his machine Maughan said:

"I think it is all over. There is something the matter with the oil."

But at 3:15 o'clock the soldering of the leak, which was in the oil cooling system, was progressing rapidly and Maughan said he would continue his flight.

Estimates by pilots at the air mail field hold that it will be impossible for Maughan to reach San Francisco before 9 o'clock.

STATE EXECUTES 134 IN 10 YEARS

Death Sentences Passed On 183 Persons In Same Period.

Harrisburg, July 20.—One hundred and thirty-four persons paid the death penalty for murder in Pennsylvania from January 1, 1913, to May 14, 1923, figures compiled by F. H. Hoy, Jr., assistant secretary to the State Board of Pardons, show. Forty-five persons have had their sentences commuted, the board is withholding its decisions on one application for commutation and it heard applications for commutation in the cases of three others at the monthly meeting this week, a total of 183 persons upon whom the sentence of death has been pronounced in the slightly more than ten years covered by the statistics.

The first electrocution in the State was on February 24, 1915, less than two months after the law abolishing hanging had become effective. The last hanging was in Philadelphia December 3, 1914. Under the old method of execution each county carried out the death penalty. The present law sends all persons who are to be electrocuted to Rockview prison, which is under the management of the Western Penitentiary, where the State's death chair is located.

In this period no woman has been executed. Several have been convicted, however, of murder in the second degree.

In each case where a person was sentenced to death, conviction of murder had been procured by the State. This is the only crime for which the death sentence can be imposed in this state and conviction must be for first degree murder. In convictions for second degree murder, the length of sentence rests with the court, but may not exceed twenty years imprisonment.

In the last decade for which figures were compiled, 1922 lead the list with the number of convictions as well as the number electrocuted. There were thirty-two persons sentenced of whom twenty-two were sent to the chair and ten received computations of sentence. Thus far this year nine persons have received the death sentence, one has been electrocuted, four have been commuted and the board of pardons has four other cases before it.

Fifteen persons were sentenced in 1913, 10 executed and 5 commuted; 1914, thirteen sentenced, 7 executed and 6 commuted; 1915, eight sentenced, 6 executed and 2 commuted; 1916, eighteen sentenced, 14 executed and 4 commuted; 1917, ten sentenced, 8 executed, and 2 commuted; 1918, nineteen sentenced, 17 executed and 2 commuted; 1919, sixteen sentenced, 11 executed and 5 commuted; 1920, twenty-two sentenced, 19 executed and 3 commuted; 1921, twenty-one sentenced, 19 executed and two commuted.

DEFIES PINCHOT TO GO TO COURT

Snyder Declares He Will Act To Test Reorganization Code.

DENIES BREAKING LAW

Salary Row With Highway Department Due to Rift Over Six Clerks, Declares State Treasurer.

Harrisburg, July 20.—State Treasurer Snyder defied Governor Pinchot Thursday to show through course of law that the State treasurer had not complied with any law in failing to pay salaries of state employees which have been held up.

The treasurer further added that he would institute proceedings in the future to test the constitutionality of the reorganization code, which the governor accuses him of trying to obstruct and hamper.

"It is the purpose of the treasurer to see that the alleged code is either made valid or declared void. How it will be done is a matter for future consideration, but it will be done, and as effectively and lawfully as the orderly procedure of the law permits," Snyder's statement said.

"In the meanwhile, I challenge the governor through the course of law to show that the treasurer had in any way failed to comply with the law, that governs the office, or in any way one that which is inconsistent with the proper performance of his official duty."

"Nothing more to say on Snyder today," said Governor Pinchot, when shown the Snyder statement. The governor left the capital to spend a week-end at his summer home in Milford.

The Snyder answer to the governor's charges that he was trying to strike the administration through its employees and obstruct and hamper the code was in detail. It denied each and every allegation made by the governor.

Charges that the treasurer held up salaries of thousands of state employees were denied, and dates and departments were specified by Snyder to support his stand. While admitting he held up some salaries because a question of their legality had arisen in his mind, the state treasurer places the blame for all other salary hold-ups on department heads, whom he charges with failing to furnish the lists to his department in time to issue the vouchers on the legal payday.

Mr. Snyder will not seek the legal advice of Attorney General Woodruff concerning the salary hold-ups, as he said no legal question has arisen which makes it necessary for him to consult the attorney general.

Auditor General Lewis announced Thursday that he had directed department heads to itemize expense accounts in accordance with the classification of their functions as contained in their appropriation measures. The order of the auditor general means that he will require departments to adhere to his ruling on appropriation bills, and not permit Dr. Clyde L. King, secretary of finance and state, to apportion department appropriations.

Through an agreement between the auditor general and W. A. Schnader, who drafted the code, and Superintendent Boyd, of purchases and supplies, the threatened mix-up over the purchase of supplies by field men in that state will be avoided. Under the Lewis ruling, gasoline, horse feed and other field supplies can be purchased by field men on proper requisition. The same ruling permits the fish and game commission to make purchases for propagation purposes without the necessity of the department of purchases and supplies handling the transaction.

terially in the bids offered by the representatives of packing firms, many of them coming from a distance, who visited the county this spring.

Twenty-seven farmers had faith enough in the undertaking to buy their steers that way. Gains of 330 pounds per steer were registered by some lots by the middle of May and the price realized on the farm without any selling or delivery expense, was $10 per hundred when the nearby stockyard markets were offering $9 and $9.25 for similar stuff.

Imbued with the success of cooperative buying many farmers not in the original pool joined the others in selling the cattle they had bought locally and fed out. Their cattle, inferior to begin with and lacking uniformity, received on an average from 50 cents to $1 per hundred pounds less than association cattle. Of the 8,000 head to be fed in Adams county this year probably half will be bought and sold through the association.

Arrangements already have been made to send D. M. Sheely, a feeder of McKnightstown, to Western markets in November to purchase the required number of cars. He and Hoffman did the purchasing last year, and the stuff they bought in has established their reputation for shrewdness and a knowledge of bovine probabilities.

To Establish Office

For those who wish to market their refinished cattle and hogs through the established stockyards, the Farm Bureau Federation is arranging for a cooperative commission office in the various centers to assure fair dealing, correct weights and careful handling, with a minimum of commission charges and delays. It is hoped by the time Pennsylvania's crop of fatted steers and hogs moves to market next year they will never be out of the hands of the farmer's own organization or his own paid representative, which is the first step in eliminating the network of middlemen and private individuals, whose toll not only reduces the return the farmer receives, but increases the price to the consumer.

CLASS HOLDS ROAST

The Willing Workers, a Sunday School class in St. Mark's Lutheran Church, Heidlersburg, hiked to Twin Bridge Park Saturday night and held a marshmallow toast and "weenie" roast. On the banks of the Conewago a bonfire was made, around which the members of the class sat. The young men had prepared willow wands for all, and as soon as the fire had died to glowing embers the real sport of the evening came. Upon each wand was a "dog" or a marshmallow sizzling over the coals and the aroma that permeated the air from them would have made a monarch envious of those who partook of this luscious feast. Every "dog" and marshmallow had to take its turn in the fiery furnace, and many came out as real burnt offerings and sacrifices, much to the dismay of the owner. Appetites were satisfied at last. Then it was that the class revelled in songs, stories and games. At a late hour the class hiked back to town.

The members of the class who were present were: Misses Chloe Asper, Ruth Linah, Elva Keckler, Ethel Houck, Hazel Linah, Ivory Starry, Rachael Goehenor, Louise Rebert, Mary Pool, Jean Linah and Alice Lupp, and Messrs. Glenn Kennedy, Roy Asper, Gerald Rebert, Joel Goehenor, James Reigle, Earl Rebert, David Kennedy, Rev. J. Harold Little, of Hanover, and the teacher of the class, J. F. Houck, Jr.

the William Penn Highway east of Lewistown at a bathing beach; east of Middletown at a refreshment stand; at Red Bridge, north of Chambersburg, near a pleasure park; on the Lincoln Highway at Caledonia Park and near Piney Mountain Inn, between Chambersburg and Gettysburg.

At all of these places it is frequently impossible for two-way traffic to pass, careless drivers having stopped their machines on both sides of the improved section of the roadway, leaving little more than enough space for one vehicle to pass.

"Conditions of this sort are not only unnecessary, but extremely dangerous," said Secretary Wright today. "They will not be tolerated. We have asked the State Police to keep the roads clear. When our motor patrol is organized within a few weeks it, too, will be directed to keep the highways open for traffic."

accomplished, said the Fire Chief, and more than pays for itself in the peace of mind and safety of the property owner and of the neighbors.

Tells How To Clean Flue

One of the easiest ways to do this, he continued, is to tie a rope to a bunch of cedar burs sufficiently large to fit tightly in the chimney. Then by one person working from the top of the flue, and another pulling on the lower end of the rope at the first floor or cellar, this brush may be dragged up and down through the chimney until all accumulations have been dislodged.

"That this is the simple duty of every citizen of this town can be easily seen by each and every one, whether from a public-spirited or from a selfish point of view," said Mr. Aumen.

He concluded by recommending that property owners should see to it that there are no cracks in the chimneys, as the cost of having them repaired is small when compared with the loss that may be sustained by fire getting from the chimney.

THIS SEE-SAWING ISN'T HELPING MATTERS MUCH

Fortier went below, switched on the light in his stateroom, and waited. Presently Solomon appeared, bearing a tray.

"Set it down," ordered Fortier. "Shut the door. Now look here!" "That man," said Fortier, "was not murdered by the knife. He was killed by being hit a terrific blow at the base of the skull, Solomon. What do you know about it?"

"Me, sir? I know nothing and I say nothing, just like that."

The blue eyes were very wide and gutless; the round face was entirely blank.

"Confound you!" exclaimed Fortier. "I don't know what to do. I owe you a good turn, but I'm cursed if I'll compound murder! And I don't believe you're half the simpleton you look, Solomon. Where's that knife of yours—the one with the lead haft?"

"Why, sir, I lost that 'ere knife today. Lost it over the side, sir."

"After it struck Gros Michel, it went overboard, eh?"

Solomon made no response, but stood in placid silence.

"See here!" exclaimed Fortier angrily. "I think your testimony is a mass of lies. Why on earth would you swear an innocent man into the noose?"

Solomon chuckled. "Me testimony don't count, sir, until it's took down in court, just like that! And if so be as I changes my mind, why, Mr. Thompson's 'ere won't be convicted."

"Oh!" Fortier gasped at the audacity of the little man. "Then you actually confess that you murdered—"

"I ain't don't of no such thing, sir," spoke up Solomon suddenly. "That 'ere man was not murdered, sir. 'E was killed in self-defense, sir! What's more, nobody can be convicted for a killing of 'im, 'cause why, 'e ain't inside the law! 'Is right name, sir, is Ennepin, and 'e's the brother o' that 'ere Pitt Jean—"

Fortier sprang to his feet. Petit Jean—Michel! The brothers who were outlaws!

"Is that a fact?" he demanded swiftly.

"Yes, sir. That 'ere Thompson is a-goin' to get 'eld in jail until they find out that this Gros Michel was an outlaw. That's all, sir. And if I might make so bold, these 'ere papers was in 'is 'and when 'e was killed, sir."

Solomon held out an envelope, then departed. Fortier did not prevent his going. He stood there, staring at those papers like a man paralyzed. For they were the identical ones he had received that afternoon from Aline Lavergne.

It all flashed upon Fortier suddenly—the slam of his cabin door as Gros Michel had left with the stolen papers, the heavy fall on the deck.

"By gad, that man Solomon is a smart one!" murmured Fortier admiringly. "He caught the fellow in the act—and Michel got killed. Then Solomon threw the blame on Thompson—" arranged to have Thompson killed.

why? Did he know that Thompson was one of Macarty's henchmen? Did he know—

Fortier turned out the lights and lay down again to think it over. The more he thought, however, the more John Solomon became to him nothing but a startling, perplexing question mark. Who and what was this little, pudgy man?

John Solomon—

CHAPTER VII

In the great white manor house of Cypremort, John Philbrick sat at dinner with his guest, Capt. Tom Wrexham, listened without saying very much at first. His protruding eyes were always staring at the wonders of the huge rooms—had stared, thus, ever since his arrival. He seemed never to see enough.

Uncle Nob, black and wrinkled, served the two men punctiliously. Wrexham ate like a gentleman. He seemed to appreciate the silver and glass and snowy linen, as a man who has been deprived of such things for a long while.

The dining-room was a great chamber all paneled in black old mahogany, lighted by candle scones and a squat candelabrum on the table—the mahogany table which, fully extended, would seat fifty guests. In the dark recesses of the room lurked black shadows and the dim sheen of silver; smoked portraits about the walls, a mammoth carved buffet loaded with plate.

"I might ha' had a place like this of my own," said Wrexham suddenly.

"Only for the law. No use for the law. That was up in Canada; place like this, all the same."

John Philbrick nodded his shaggy head with a sage air.

"Thought all along you might be a Cantuck," he commented. "Funny how folks around here brag about Louisiana being settled by the French! It was really Canadians, Iberville and his Hudson Bay bunch—the same crowd hung together, same names and all. All Canadians born. Well, try this venison, now! I don't guess you've had much venison at sea."

Chamber Plans New Work

The Chamber of Commerce, of Chambersburg, would be a clearing house for information on apple markets of the county if plans discussed at the tour and meeting of the Franklin County Horticultural Society materialize. Discussion of the project called for placing with both the Chambersburg chamber and the Waynesboro one listings of grades and varieties of apples together with the amounts available at the various orchards. Details of the proposal will be worked out later.

"Three years ago at a banquet I was stricken with acute indigestion. Two doctors worked over me for an hour before I came to. I had had severe colic attacks before, but nothing like that. No doctors or medicine gave me permanent help until a friend, who was at the banquet, advised me to take a course of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, which I did with wonderful results." THE FARMER AND WHEAT

Through the Wheat Council of the United States, which was organized a few days ago at Chicago, a constructive effort is being made to advance the interests of the producers by developing and promoting through voluntary action the application of methods of organizing the production and marketing of wheat in the United States. This is in order to establish or approximate a balance between domestic production and consumption and to bring the control of domestic prices of wheat within the United States instead of abroad; and to develop profitable outlets for such surplus as may exist. It will also be the effort of the organization to increase the consumption of wheat and wheat products by informing the consumer of the advantages to be gained by such increased consumption.

Directors of the Wheat Council have issued a statement in which they contend that the stabilization of the domestic price at a profitable level and the consequent improvement of the condition of the wheat farmer is dependent upon bringing the control of the domestic wheat price within the borders of the United States. This may be accomplished, it is pointed out, in three ways—reduced acreage and production, orderly marketing, and increased consumption.

Under the stimulation of the World War the wheat acreage of the United States was enormously extended. For the past three years wheat acreage in the United States has exceeded the average acreage prior to the World War by more than 13,000,000 acres. This is equivalent to an excess production of from 160,000,000 to 200,000,000 bushels annually. The exportation of wheat before the war averaged 15 per cent of the total. For the past three years it has been in excess of 25 per cent of the crop. Also since the World War there has been a gradual recovery of the wheat producing countries.

It is the opinion of the organization which is now doing everything possible to bring about better conditions that a reduction in the wheat acreage and wheat production in this country is absolutely essential to a profitable price for wheat to the American wheat grower.

Even Pennsylvania's small farmers are disposing of their rural holdings and seeking employment in industry. This trend toward the congested centers must be stopped through some plan of action which will give the farmer a reasonable profit of his products. Under the operation of the farm credit banks through Federal direction credit facilities are being provided which are available to meet these distressful conditions.—From Harrisburg Telegraph.

JANET'S MORNING BATH

I've seen some lovely sights, I think—
A rosebud bursting into pink,
A distant hill top drenched with gold,
A tree with all that it could hold
Of blossoms in the early spring—
But there can be no lovelier thing
Among the beauties Nature hath
Than little Janet in her bath.

Come upstairs now with me and see
Our baby on her mother's knee,
And watch this glad performance
Through—

A pretty sight I'll show to you!
Fairer than any landscape scene
Or silver brook or meadow green.
I'll show you dimpled legs and arms
And babyhood with all its charms.

I'm sorry for the man who hath
Not seen a baby in her bath,
For, be he old and be he wise,
He does not know the charm which lies

In tiny bodies, plump and sweet,
And little toes on rosy feet,
Nor does he know how fair to see
A baby in her bath can be.

I've tired of distant hills afar,
I've wearied of the morning star;
Familiar with a silver brook,
I've never turned my head to look,
But when the mother says, "It's time
To bathe the baby," I will climb
The stair and stand about to see
The loveliest sight on earth to me.

DIARY OF A SOLDIER

Interesting Experiences and Minute Details of the Civil War Career of William A. McIlhenny, Gettysburg Veteran, as Taken From Day to Day Ledger Published For The First Time.

THE AUTHOR

William A. McIlhenny, who now resides on Lincoln avenue, Gettysburg, was born August 31, 1839, in Straban township. He is the great grandson of Robert McIlhenny, one of the pioneers of the county and a veteran of the Revolutionary war; a grandson of Robert McIlhenny, likewise, a Revolutionary War veteran, and the son of Hugh McIlhenny.

Mr. McIlhenny enlisted as a private at Frederick, Maryland, in Company C of Cole's Battalion, Maryland Cavalry. This company was made up largely of Pennsylvanians. He was subsequently advanced to corporal and later made sergeant of the company while serving in the Shenandoah Valley.

At the expiration of his original enlistment and at the time of the reorganization of Cole's Battalion he was appointed a second lieutenant of Company C of the regiment, generally known as the First Potomac Home Brigade of Maryland Cavalry.—Editor's note.

(BY WILLIAM A. McILHENNY)

We had a fine company of Infantry called the "Independent Blues of Gettysburg" under the command of Captain Henry Buehler, with Dr. Fahnestock as First Lieutenant; John Culp as Second Lieutenant and John T. McIlhenny (my brother) as Orderly Sergeant. They immediately offered their services to the government and were accepted and they were sworn into the United States service and went into camp at York. We were living near Hunterstown. My father and I drove down to York to see the camp and drove back the same day. That was the farthest I ever was away from home in my life, up to that time.

Both North and South were busy drilling and equipping their armies, preparing for the clash which was soon to come. We had a splendid army at Washington under Generals Scott and McDowell.

The troops lying at York and Harrisburg were placed under the command of General Patterson. Our leaders finally decided to move on the enemy. McDowell crossed the Potomac and moved on the enemy stationed at Bull Run.

When the advance of our army was passing through Alexandria, Colonel Ellsworth went into a Rebel's house to take down a rebel flag and was shot through the heart, dying instantly and the man who shot him was immediately shot in return. These were the first men killed in the war on either side.

General Patterson moved with his army by way of Chambersburg and Hagerstown and crossed the Potomac at Williamsport and moved on to Martinsburg, West Virginia. General McDowell attacked the rebels at Bull Run and was holding his own all right, but General Patterson failing to attack the rebels in the Shenandoah Valley, under General Jackson, let them slip across the mountain and join General Lee which enabled him to defeat our army under General McDowell and drove them back to Washington. Demoralized and disorganized and with the three months volunteers enlistment almost expired, our government only began to comprehend what a task they had before them. Mr. Lincoln immediately called out three hundred thousand volunteers for three years or during the war. The North took up the refrain "we are coming Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more." Then came the best blood of the young men all over the North, the humble youth of the farm who was never (some of them) more than five miles away from home; from the shops; from the schools and colleges and soon we had the finest army that ever trod on American soil. General McClellan was placed in command of the army of the Potomac.

I will not attempt to give an account of all the battles and skirmishes that took place in the four years of this bloody war (history had recorded all that), but I will try and give a short sketch of my enlistment and experience and what part I took in preserving this our Glorious Nation.

In the summer of 1861 the raising of regiments and companies was going on and we were watching and looking for the best organization to join. About August 1st, the Ex-Governor of Maryland procured permission from the government to recruit a Brigade of three regiments of Infantry and a Battalion of Cavalry for service along the borders of Maryland and Pennsylvania. Consequently old Captain John Horner recruited a company of Cavalry from Adams County and from the vicinity of Emmitsburg in Maryland. Thinking this would be a nice and easy organization to belong to and we would never get very far from home, Captain Horner soon had his company ready to be mustered in. The scene of parting from parents and sisters comes vividly before my eyes today. It was a trying moment. Everybody had some little gift for us that we might possibly need for comfort. I remember one article called a "Housewife" filled with pins, needles, buttons, etc.

With many kisses and "God Bless You" we left Gettysburg in several large farm wagons for Emmitsburg. The last lady I remember of kissing was Mrs. Solomon Welty, mother of Mrs. Dr. McKnight.

Paragraphs From Nearby Counties York

Hanover Bandit Held
An alleged bandit giving his name as Charles F. Leister, alias C. F. Parr, 23 years old, Hanover, was charged Thursday before Alderman Walter F. Owen, York, with attempted robbery and larceny and with aggravated assault and battery with attempt to kill following an escapade in which he figured in that city. Leister is alleged to have attempted to hold up and rob Francis Whare, of the firm of Hertz & Whare, butchers, in the store room of the company, 879 East Market street, and to have fired a bullet which grazed Mr. Whare's body after which he ran from the shop. Leister said after his arrest, "I had the drop on him and when I saw him going for a rifle in the corner, I let him have it."

City May Get Bill
Because Mayor E. S. Hugentugler of York has been holding back for the use of York certain police court fines which under Pennsylvania law must be turned over to the state, a representative of the automobile division of the state highway department arrived in York, and began an examination of police dockets and police court records. It is the intention of the state department to make a list of all such fines collected since January 1, 1920, and which the mayor failed to turn over to the state treasurer, and render to York a bill for their payment. The amount may reach $4,000. In a like manner the state recently enforced the payment of thousands of dollars due the commonwealth from other cities, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia among them.

Hoy, 8, Hangs Himself

Richard, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hake, near Bald Hill, in the Conewago hills, York county, was found dead, hanging with a noose about his neck, on the third floor of the Hake home, by his younger sister, Gladys, aged six, about 1 o'clock, when she went to call him to dinner. She rushed down the stairs, telling her older sister, Frances, who was caring for the children, while the parents were attending market in York, who in turn called her older brother, Herman, from the fields.

Frederick

Author Returning Home

Thomas C. Harbaugh, famous writer of dime novel thrillers, poet, former newspaper man, once a frequent contributor to The Hagerstown Herald, will return to Middletown from Ohio, and end his days in the home of his boyhood. Harbaugh, once reputed to have been worth $50,000, was saved from the poorhouse by G. C. Roderick, editor of the Middletown Valley Register, a friend of his. Mr. Harbaugh was to have gone to the Miami county infirmary in Ohio, this week. Instead he will be brought back to Frederick county. Mr. Harbaugh was born near Middletown, and has relatives living in Hagerstown as well as Frederick county. He went to Casstown, Ohio, 65 years ago. The aged author will remain in one of the furnished rooms of his homestead at Casstown until next month when he will be brought east. All the other rooms are bare—been disposed of a few days ago when his curios, relics and furniture were sold at public auction. They netted him approximately $400.

Banks Give Figures

Frederick city banks' combined resources total $25,297,485.81, according to the statements called for on June 30. This sum is divided among six banks. The total deposits for the six banks aggregate $12,045,201.65, of which $7,424,896.96, are time deposits and $4,620,304.77 demand deposits. Some unusually interesting figures are contained in the most recent report of the Frederick city banks. The book value of banking houses and furniture and fixtures for all the banks in the city is $416,992.10, a proof of the healthy condition of the banks which can afford to carry their banking houses and equipment at such low figures. Were the buildings to be sold they would command much more than the figure quoted.

Attention Car Owners

Since service has become the keynote of every successful institution many unique forms of service have appeared.

A striking instance is furnished by the Chicago Motor Club. For the benefit of their members, they maintain a fleet of emergency motorcycles that dash to the aid of those stranded on the road.

In 1923 they answered 25,195 calls for emergency aid. Considering that the territory covered by the Chicago Motor Club embraces only a small part of the United States we can only imagine how many are stranded yearly throughout the country.

Commenting on this service—Mr. W. M. Plank of the local Exide Service Stations says—"If folks would take a little precaution, less work of this kind would have to be done."

"By having a battery test—twice a month, the danger of battery trouble generally can be avoided. And I happen to know that 12,852 of the emergency calls answered by the Chicago Motor Club were cases of ignition trouble."

"How many of these were battery calls I don't know—but I do know that many calls would have been averted by spending two minutes at a service station before starting."

"When folks realize that most road trouble can be avoided by carrying the proper 'spare part' equipment and submitting their cars to frequent inspection there will be less need for such an expensive service as the Chicago Motor Club maintains."
